NGO Partnerships & Secretariats

- Facilitate information sharing.
- Problem solve.
- Create a learning space for NGOs to discuss ideas, programmatic approaches and impact.
- Leverage resources.
- Create a unified voice and message for advocacy.
- Participate in national, regional and global level dialogue on malaria, health and development.
- Document and disseminate best practices for program implementation.
- Coordinate the scaling-up of health services.

Strength of Building NGO Partnerships

NGO PARTNERSHIP

Malaria Secretariats

Developed Out of National Fresh Air Malaria Workshops

Strengths of the Secretariat Model

- Creates a platform for NGOs to be actively involved at national, regional and global levels of policy making and strategy development.
- Helps bridge the gap between NGOs, CBOs, FBOs, private sector and governments to more effectively problem solve.
- Empowers NGOs to more effectively mobilize communities toward a common goal.
- Facilitates the harmonization of NGO programs with government approaches, creating more integrated health systems.

Lessons Learned

- Effective partnership development requires clearly identified needs, goals, strategies, objectives and priorities.
- The investment in workshops and meetings to develop relationships and social capital is important throughout the process to effectively share information, build strategy and adapt to changes.
- Partnership goals and strategies must fit within the governmental, cultural and social context and among the Partnership's member organizations.
- Leadership and management of the Partnership and Secretariat should be shared among members of the NGO network .

Moving Forward

- Partnerships and Secretariats are only one of many models NGOs can use to work together
- NGO collaboration is becoming increasingly important with global policies shifting toward rapid scale-up of disease prevention and control and health systems strengthening
- NGOs must build advocacy capacity and work together to influence policy and develop strategies at the national, regional and global levels
